

Forum for Conscious Education

Within the development of human culture lies a deeply rooted trait that resonates through the corridors of history, spanning from ancient scriptures to contemporary discourse. A considerable part of it pertains to spiritual or religious knowledge, which seems to be linked to human cultures, but is, however, frequently overlooked in academia. For us to engage with this topic from a philosophical point of view can be described as Spiritual Philosophy. This term encapsulates humanity's enduring quest to comprehend the supposedly eternal essence of the universe and its relation to it— a pursuit often neglected by Western-centric, secularized philosophical frameworks. Following this, the forum places a strong emphasis on a methodology that combines both rational analysis and experiential learning. This approach seeks to demystify the investigation of spiritual topics grounding them in practical, accessible terms. By fostering a balance between intellectual rigor and personal experience, the forum aims to make the exploration of these profound subjects more relatable to individuals from diverse backgrounds and beliefs.

The Forum is dedicated to nurturing an academic and critical dialogue on the aforementioned subject matter. This balanced methodology is particularly evident in our inquiry into Rudolf Steiner's Phenomenology of Consciousness, which advocates for a reasoned, experience-based exploration of spiritual development. The forum is geared towards individuals open to exploring perspectives beyond the limits of purely secular thinking. Each session of the forum will begin with a 30 to 45-minute presentation by one of our esteemed speakers, followed by an open forum for engaging discussions.
